DOORS CLOSED TO OFFICE SEEKERS

President Wilson Serves Notice That They Won't be Welcome Unless They Are Invited

ENJOYS AUTO SPIN WITHOUT MILITARY AIDE

Members of Cabinet Sworn in—Secretary of Labor Will Have to Serve Without Salary For a Time—One New Englander Nominated For Ways and Means Committee at Democratic Caucus—Speaker Clark Renominated.

Washington, March 5.—With the tinsel and the military pomp, the cheers of the multitude, the stirring music of bands and the heavy tread of marching thousands, the fireworks and the limelight only pleasant memory, Woodrow Wilson settled down in the chair of president as quietly and with as little ceremony, probably, as any president ever has crossed the threshold of the White House to become its master. His long day was crowded with incidents and filled with the favor of the power that is a president's.

Notice to Office Seekers. Almost his first act was to serve notice upon office seekers that they will not be welcome at the White House unless they have been invited. Almost his last act tonight was to confer with Senator John W. Kern, today chosen as leader of the democrats in the senate and reputed representative of the administration in the upper house. In between he found time to shake hands with close to two thousand persons, consult with his new cabinet and with a few friends in congress, dictate letters and generally launch his own ship of administration.

Secretary Tumulty Kept Busy. In spite of the reports that Mr. Wilson might be expected to change many of the precedents that have grown up about the presidency, he bothered with none of importance, today, except that which pertains to the machinery of the executive offices, did mostly what trained officials told him should be done and took up the routine of government with ease.

Joseph T. Tumulty, Mr. Wilson's secretary, about as busy as his chief. He talked to the newspaper men stationed at the White House a half dozen times; dictated many letters, received the congratulations of scores of friends from New Jersey and talked with many prominent democrats.

A "Restricted Open Door." The president spent the morning in his office; the afternoon at the White House at luncheon and in the east room receiving callers. At four o'clock shut up shop and went out with Mrs. Wilson for his first automobile ride through Washington.

All the details of the day's work came by appointment and the reported policy of the "open door" was explained to be an open door only to those who came upon public business.

Shakes Hands of 1140 Callers. After luncheon with his family and Secretary Tumulty, Mr. Wilson learned of the use of the East room. He stood for forty minutes and shook hands with 1140 persons. Major Thomas L. Rhodes, personal aide for a year to former president Taft, met him by as fast as he could get their names and the new president never flinched at the ordeal.

With all the callers disposed of, Mr. Wilson called for one of the White House automobiles used by Mr. Taft and started out for a spin around Washington. The president, accompanied by Mrs. Taft, went with him, but the two motorcycle police assigned to the president's protection on such trips kept close behind on the ride.

Conferences With Cabinet Members. After the president returned from his auto ride, Mr. Garrison, the secretary of the state, had a brief conference with him. "I told the president that I thought I earned my salary today," said Secretary Garrison. "He said, 'You can't go from an equity to a government department in a day and get accustomed to it at once.'"

Mr. Bryan, the secretary of state, called after the cabinet. Mr. Garrison brought with him Huntington Wilson, former assistant secretary of state, and the heads of the various bureaus of the state department, presenting them to the president. Secretary Bryan said there were some questions in the various bureaus which required attention. The president at once but that they could wait.

NEW CABINET SWORN IN. New Secretary of Labor to Serve Without Salary.

Washington, March 5.—In marked contrast to the pomp with which their chief yesterday was inducted into office, six members of President Wilson's official family today were sworn in.

Those who began their official duties today were: Secretaries Bryan, Garrison, Daniels, Lane, Burleson and Wilson. Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, Secretary of Agriculture Houston, Attorney General McKendree and Secretary of Commerce Redfield will take their oaths tomorrow.

Mr. Bryan took the oath at the office of the secretary of state, where he appeared near 4 o'clock with Mrs. Bryan and a party of friends. Assistant Secretary of State William C. Clegg also was present when the oath was administered by William McNair, chief clerk of the department.

The last official act of Secretary Knox was to sign the commission of his successor, Mr. Knox departed this afternoon for Palm Beach, Fla.

Lindley M. Garrison, the new secretary of war, was sworn in a few minutes before 4 o'clock by John B. Randolph, chief clerk of the secretary's office, who has sworn in every secretary of war since the days of President Grant. All the forenoon Mr. Garrison had passed in conference with former Secretary Blount.

The largest gathering to witness the ceremonies attending the induction into office of a cabinet member was presided over by Joseph Daniels took the oath that made him secretary of the navy. There was only a small party of friends, but the number was soon swelled by members of the democratic
